Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Monday 05 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Much colder with snow showers, but often sunny inland.

Today:
Patchy rain and snow clearing southwards, then many inland areas dry and sunny, but feeling much colder in the wind. Frequent snow and hail showers in north with a spell of heavy snow and severe gales for Shetland this morning.

Tonight:
Widespread sharp frost and although dry inland, snow and hail showers will affect northern areas and increasingly some western parts of the UK in strong winds.

Tuesday:
Another cold and windy day with sunny spells, but also scattered snow and hail showers, heaviest and most frequent in northern Scotland and also along some western coasts.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Sharp frost Wednesday, but sunny with wintry showers easing. Cloud and rain in the north moving south Thursday and Friday. Becoming cold to the north and windy with wintry showers.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.